Miss Miller of Woodland and Miss Francis of Rio Vista, spent Friday last week with Mrs. Drorost.

Dear Cousin Norma:

Let me take this time to introduce myself- I am the granddaughter of Jerome MELVIN Joy of Dixon who was the son of Ann Rebecca Francis and Charles Joy. Ann was the daughter of Nicholas J. Francis and Mary Comer. Who lived in Rio Vista.

Over the past 25 years I have been researching the Francis/Francois family. while in Salt Lake researching the Francis/Francois I was able to learn the birth of Nicholas J. Francis. Once I found the birth place of Nicholas J. Francis/Francios fell in line.

Was wondering if you might have any information on either the Francis or Comer families? There are still questions that I have about them. One major question is where was Nicholas J. Francis and Mary Comer married at? Could it have been either Sacramento or Woodland? Another question is Ann had a cousin named Lizze Schneider who lived in Sacramento she married Charles John Gannon what happen to them?

Any help you could give me on either the Comer or Francis family be greatly appreciated.

You new cousin Zandra

I know nothing about the Comer family.
Nicholas and Mary could have been married in Woodland, where Peter Francis, Nicholas' brother lived.

I know nothing about Lizzie Schneider or Charles Gannon.

I remember the farm in Dixon, where I was a very small child. Melvin showed me my first close-up view

It is so nice to have a new cousin - and I love your name, Zandra!

CHICKEN THIEVES.

Woodland had a round with chicken thieves last winter which should have been sufficient for a year or two. One man was sent to Folsom for one year for the offense, and this seemed to stop matters for a while. They were not contented, however, and began to operate in the country near town. George Geary lost all the chickens he had in one or two nights, and others reported slight losses.

The latest is Peter Francis, who lives on the Moore ditch about two miles from town just back of the Geary place. Mr. Francis has a ten acre vineyard and a small lot of clover, and raises a good many chickens during the year. The old gentleman lives all alone, and is quite deaf and some one who evidently knows that he is not easily awakened, has been helping himself to the old man's chickens. Just how often this individual has visited the roost, Mr. Francis does not know, but he has missed eighteen chickens altogether.

Of course, Mr. Francis does not know who the thief is, but surmises that it is the same individual who stole the Geary chickens, who ever he may be. This, however, does not give any clue to the real culprit, as the Geary thief was never caught. The officers have been notified in regard to the theft, and they are looking the matter up. They certainly will have the good wishes of the people if they succeed in jailing the miserable culprit.

THE LOWE CASE.

Stubborn Contest For the Possession of Little Lucile.

The Plaintiff Will Move to Vacate a Decree Modifying a Decree in Relation to Custody.

The plaintiff and his attorney, C. W. Thomas, in the case of O. A. Lowe vs. Hattie E. Lowe, were served Friday with a notice by Dorn & Dorn, attorneys-at-law, appearing specially for Hattie E. Lowe, the defendant, for the purpose of the motion hereinafter referred to, but for no other purpose whatsoever, that they will, on behalf of said defendant, move the court for an order vacating and setting aside that certain decree modifying the decree as to custody of minor child, entered in the above entitled action on July 11, 1899.

The motion will be made upon the ground that the court had no authority to make such order or decree and that the same was made without notice to defendant; that the court had no jurisdiction over the person of said minor child, Lucile Lowe, as the said child was not within the territorial limits of the State of California when said decree was made, and upon the further ground that long prior to making said decree the plaintiff, O. A. Lowe, intermarried with one Mary J. Hoesch, and that by said marriage the said decree according to the express terms and provisions of the judgment and decree entered November 1, 1895, became and ever since said marriage has been and now is null, void, abrogated and of no effect in so far as the same related to the custody of said minor child; that said original judgment, at the time of making the modifying decree, did not contain any provisions as to the custody of the child or any matter subject to the attempted modification of said original judgment; and that said attempted modification was in effect a new decree relating to matters not within the purview or adjudication of the decree attempted to be modified, and was wholly unwarrantable, null and void.

In conclusion the plaintiff notified that upon the hearing of said motion, there will be used this notice of motion, and also all the records and papers in the above entitled cause, also the affidavits of Hiram W. Johnson, D. S. Dorn and Fred W. Lawrence, and the certified copy of the marriage license and certificate of said plaintiff and Mary J. Hoesch, also oral testimony to be offered at the hearing of said motion.

The affidavit of Hiram W. Johnson states that he has not been employed as attorney for defendant, or in any respect represented or acted for her since the entry of the original judgment. M. S. Dorn deposes and says that neither himself, M. A. Dorn nor the firm of Dorn & Dorn was ever attorney of record for defendant.

The affidavit of Fred W. Lawrence is to the effect that said minor child Lucile Lowe, has not been within the territorial limits of the State of California at any time since November 10, 1895.

The motion will be heard by Judge Gaddis Monday, September 25th at 10 A. M.

THE LOWE CASE.

The Motion to Vacate Modified Judgment Denied.

Defendant's Counsel Allowed Twenty Days in Which to Prepare His Bill of Exceptions.

The motion of defendant in the case of Obe Lowe vs. Hattie Lowe to set aside and vacate the modified judgment of the court whereby the custody of the child, Lucille, was transferred from the custody of plaintiff to the defendant, was heard by Judge Gaddie in the Superior Court this morning. Attorney O. W. Thomas appeared for plaintiff and Attorney Savage, of San Francisco, for defendant.

The following affidavit made by O. A. Lowe, was submitted:

"That Dorn & Dorn in October, 1896, were attorneys in said matter in San Francisco and procured a writ of habeas corpus by which they obtained the custody of said child and deprived the affiant of its custody, and they were the attorneys of record when under said order it became necessary to return said child. They continued to and did confer with affiant about the return of said child; that affiant has since that time conferred with said attorneys about the whereabouts of said child and having the same returned to this affiant; that on October 9, 1896, plaintiff had a conference with said attorneys in their office in San Francisco (they being Joseph), in which said attorneys represented said defendant, the subject matter of said conference being the return of said child to plaintiff at Woodland; that in said conference the said attorneys proposed and stated to affiant that owing to the fact that defendant had become indebted and had drawn certain drafts against said F. M. Lawrence or the Examiner of San Francisco and the same was not paid, they thought that if affiant would put up from $800 to $1000 they could procure the return of said child; that affiant went to said office at the response from a letter from said attorneys and the above conference was the result of said visit; that at diverse time since October, 1896, said attorneys have discussed the matter in litigation and the custody of said child and its return to plaintiff, and at all times affiant was led to believe from said conversations the said attorneys continued to represent the said defendant, and that they know the whereabouts of defendant and said child; that said attorneys exhibited to affiant a letter from said defendant; that no change of attorneys has ever been had or made in said matter to the knowledge of affiant."

Mr. Savage maintained that the modified decree is not in accordance with the stipulations of the parties in the original judgment and that the court had no jurisdiction in the case. After hearing Mr. Thomas, Judge Gaddie stated that he is perfectly satisfied that the court had jurisdiction, but in regard to the other point raised by counsel for defendant, he desired counsel to present authorities.

After hearing the authorities of the attorneys the court denied the motion and allowed the counsel for defendant twenty days in which to prepare his bill of exceptions.

THE LOWE DIVORCE CASE.

The Terms of a Compromise Settled Out of Court.

Defendant Gets Decree on the Ground of Cruelty and Mr. Lowe the Custody of the Child.

The case of Lowe vs. Lowe was called in the Superior Court this morning. Judge Hinkson, of Sacramento presiding. His title was to be done except to ratify an agreement reached by the attorneys and principals in the case on Thursday evening.

By the terms of the compromise the case was not tested, and after hearing one witness a decree of divorce was granted to her on that ground.

The conditions of the decree conform to the following: The plaintiff shall reside at the home of her mother, Mrs. George Adams, at reasonable times. At such times the little girl may be permitted to remain with her mother for a period not to exceed a month. Once a month the child shall be permitted to be accompanied by her mother.

In consideration of the payment of $5,000, to be made within forty-eight hours of the signing of the decree, defendant waives all claim for alimony or any further interest in the property of the defendant.

R. E. Hopkins and Gen. A. L. Hart were attorneys for defendant and R. Clark and Hiram Johnson for the plaintiff.

The case, which started off with every promise of some very sensational developments, ended tamely, and the community was glad of it.

Special Dispatch to The Call.

WOODLAND, June 20.—Judge Gaddis has rendered a decision modifying the decree of divorce in the case of Lowe vs. Lowe. The domestic infelicities of O. A. Lowe and his divorced wife, Hattie E. Lowe, have been described in The Call. The case has become notorious on account of the prominence of the principals and the sensational flight of Mrs. Lowe from the United States, in order to avoid the processes of the court.

In November, 1895, judgment was entered in the Superior Court of Yolo County in favor of Mrs. Lowe upon her cross-complaint to Mr. Lowe's complaint for divorce. It was ordered that Lucille Lowe, a minor child, be awarded to her father with the proviso that Mrs. Lowe, at certain times and under certain circumstances, should be entitled to enjoy her society. Another condition of the decree was that in the event of the marriage of Mr. Lowe so much of the decree as related to the custody of the child should be null and void.

After one of these stipulated monthly visits Mrs. Lowe clandestinely left the United States, taking with her the child. That was over a year after the divorce was granted. She was first heard from in Honolulu. There was some correspondence in reference to extradition, but the Attorney General of the Sandwich Islands did not encourage that method of regaining possession of the child.

After several months Mrs. Lowe and the child again disappeared and all trace of them was lost until 1898, when Mrs. Lowe was located in British Columbia. She was discovered under the name of Mrs. Simpson and later the child was found in a convent school in Spokane under the same name.

In the meantime a writ was issued from the Superior Court of this county citing Mrs. Lowe to appear and show cause why she should not be adjudged guilty of contempt of court. After much difficulty this writ was served last January. During the latter part of February another writ was served citing her to appear and bring with her her child. This motion was granted upon a notice served upon her attorneys and the clerk of the court, she residing out of the State.

She failed to obey the citation and Judge Gaddis rendered the decision heretofore referred to.

The modification of the decree has not yet been prepared, but it will provide that Mr. Lowe shall have absolute control of the child. Just what proceedings will then be taken in order to recover the child has not yet developed, but it is probable that Mr. Lowe, through his attorney, C. W. Thomas, will apply for a writ of habeas corpus.

THE LOWE CASE.

The Motion to Vacate Modified Judgment Denied.

Defendant's Counsel Allowed Twenty Days in Which to Prepare His Bill of Exceptions.

The motion of defendant in the case of Obe Lowe vs. Hattie Lowe to set aside and vacate the modified judgment of the court whereby the custody of the child, Lucille, was transferred from the custody of plaintiff to the defendant, was heard by Judge Gaddis in the Superior Court this morning. Attorney C. W. Thomas appeared for plaintiff and Attorney Savage, of San Francisco, for defendant.

The following affidavit made by O. A. Lowe, was submitted:

"That Dorn & Dorn in October, 1896, were attorneys in said matter in San Francisco and procured a writ of habeas corpus by which they obtained the custody of said child and deprived the affiant of its custody, and they were the attorneys of record when under said order it became necessary to return said child. The continued to and did confer with affiant about the return of said child; that affiant has since that time conferred with said attorneys about the whereabouts of said child and having the same returned to this affiant; that on October 9, 1896, plaintiff had a conference with said attorneys in their office in San Francisco (there being John Lawrence and John Joseph) in which said attorneys represented said defendant, the subject matter of said conference being the return of said child to plaintiff at Woodland; that in said conference the said attorneys proposed and stated to affiant that owing to the fact that defendant had become indebted and had drawn certain drafts against said F. M. Lawrence or the Examiner of San Francisco and the same was not paid, they thought that if affiant would put up from $800 to $1000 they could procure the return of said child; that affiant went to said office at the response from a letter from said attorneys and the above conference was the result of said visit; that at diverse time since October, 1896, said attorneys have discussed the matter in litigation and the custody of said child and its return to plaintiff, and at all times affiant was led to believe from said conversations the said attorneys continued to represent the said defendant, and that they know the whereabouts of defendant and said child; that said attorneys exhibited to affiant a letter from said defendant; that no change of attorneys has ever been had or made in said matter to the knowledge of affiant."

Mr. Savage maintained that the modified decree is not in accordance with the stipulations of the parties in the original judgment and that the court had no jurisdiction in the case. After hearing Mr. Thomas, Judge Gaddis stated that he is perfectly satisfied that the court had jurisdiction, but in regard to the other point raised by counsel for defendant, he desired counsel to present authorities.

After hearing the authorities of the attorneys the court denied the motion and allowed the counsel for defendant twenty days in which to prepare his bill of exceptions.

Hi Zandra,

I'm Bridget and Anton Miller's grgrgranddaughter, descended down through their oldest daughter, Mary Elizabeth Miller.

I've been doing research on this branch of the family, inconsistently for several years. I come occassionally to Woodland and have been using their archive facilities. I didn't know that her sister had come with her to California. A note on the back of a family picture just mentions her brother. Family tradition has it that they originally came to Boston as servants and work there until they had repaid their fare to this country. My mother told me they came around the horn, but another source said they went to Panama and came across by train and then up to Sacramento by steamship. Another area to research.

How are you related to the Comer/ Miller (Muller)? I would love to hear from you and swap information.

Sincerely,

Mary Guizio

Hi Cousin,

My phone number is 831-476-8765, we are located in Soquel, CA down by Santa Cruz / Capitola area. I've been doing research on the Comer/Miller branch for a few years and we also had the Archer/Butler branch located in the Woodland/ Madison area. So it's been hit and miss with the Miller's / Comers.

I would love to exchange with you all that I have on the Millers / Comers. But if you've been using the Yolo Archives we probably have the same information, but let's compare.

I don't have anything on their brother. Both my mother, aunt and sister who were close to my great, great grandmother Mary Elizabeth Miller have passed away and so has all the information. I do have a copy of their marriage certificate, thanks for asking.

My line of research has been:

Comer, Bridget and Antone (Muller) Miller
Comer, Mary Elizabeth and Timothy Nunan
Nunan, Bertha and James Daniel Archer
Archer, Mary Elizabeth and Lawrence DeQuincy
Me and my husband, Richard (Dick) Guizio

I should be home this weekend, after 10 am, we have a message machine, I may be out gardening, so leave a message and I promise to get back to you. The rest of the family, my cousins will be excited to hear all the news.

Hope to hear from you soon.

Your new found cousin,

Mary Guizio

History of Commercial Brewing in Yolo County

By: David L. Wilkinson *

The Pacific Coast of the U.S. was dotted with small, independent breweries during the early settlement and development of the region. Historical records indicate that during the 1860's no less than 280 individuals, firms or partnerships were independently engaged in producing steam beer, ale, and porter on the Pacific Coast (including British Columbia and Alaska). Of this number of breweries, approximately 155 were located in California. Several breweries were well-established in San Francisco by the 1850's and by 1870 at least twelve (12) large commercial breweries were brewing beer in San Francisco. During this time Sacramento boasted five (5) breweries including the Borchers & Schwartz establishment that eventually became known as the City Brewery. It is claimed that this establishment was the first brewery to use mechanical refrigeration in the production of steam beer.

The City of Woodland was one of a few smaller communities during this era that had multiple breweries. Woodland had two (2) breweries as did towns such as Auburn, Chico, Oakland, Santa Cruz and Truckee. Apparently, the breweries in Woodland supplied the demand for the entire Yolo County as no other commercial breweries are recorded for the County.

The Woodland Brewery was started in 1869 by George L. Wirth who was born in 1838 in Wurtemberg, Germany and came to California in 1860. The brewery appears on the 1871 map of Woodland and was located on the south side of Lincoln Street near Walnut Street. The Woodland Brewery was described in the "Western Shore Gazetteer" of 1870:

"This building is of wood, twenty by thirty feet and one story high. The brewery apparatus has a capacity of five to six barrels per day, but is run only for local market. The proprietors employ two men, and purchase all their hops and barley. It is the intention of the proprietors to enlarge their business, and compete with other breweries for the trade in other localities."

Plans for expanding the Woodland Brewery apparently never materialized as historical records show the brewery disappearing by the 1890's. The son of George Wirth opened a store on Main Street in Woodland, and today the Wirth family is still involved in business in downtown Woodland.

* Other Yolo County residents that contributed to this paper include: David Adams, Aaron Bob, Tom Metzger Sr., Jack Potter, Larry Rudolph, Shipley Walters, Steve Webber (Yolo County Archives), and Gary Wirth.

The second brewery in Woodland was the Yolo Brewery, originally established in 1861 near the community of Yolo by John K. Schuerley and Antone Miller. Schuerley was born in 1832 in ^{Horne} ~~in~~ ^{Schwäbisch} ~~Wurtemberg~~, Germany and Miller was born in 1837 in Alsace, ^{E. Stuggert} Germany. These two men immigrated to the U.S. and lived for a time in Cincinnati, where they met. In the early 1860's both Schuerley and Miller came to Yolo County via the Isthmus of Panama. For a short while, Miller was a brewer in Sacramento, but eventually he and Schuerley set up a small brewery on E. Lowe's land, about half way between Woodland and Yolo. In 1862 the Yolo Brewery was moved to Woodland on Main Street near what is now Nugget Market.

In 1868 a larger Yolo Brewery was erected of brick next to the original wooden structure. The Gazetteer describes the Yolo Brewery as:

"forty by fifty feet, two stories high and built of brick. The brewery has a capacity of six barrels per day, but is only run for the home market, averaging about eight barrels per week. A large still is included in the brewery, but is not used, owing to the revenue restrictions. A part of the hops used in brewing are raised by the proprietors, as well as a large portion of the barley. Three men are employed constantly, besides the proprietors."

In 1879 Antone Miller died, and in 1881 John Schuerley sold the Yolo Brewery to Joseph Germeshausen, who had recently arrived in Woodland. Germeshausen was originally from Prussia, and before purchasing the Yolo Brewery farmed 320 acres of grain near Plainfield. The brewery flourished and was eventually organized into the Yolo Brewing Company of which Germeshausen was President and Manager. Germeshausen was also a Director of the First National Bank of Woodland and a major stockholder. In 1910 Germeshausen retired from the Yolo Brewing Company.

There were five other partners in the Yolo Brewery Company, with various business interests in Woodland. These partners were: Otto Schluer, a German immigrant who owned a Woodland bakery; Chris Sieber Sr., also a German immigrant and a partner of Schluer's in the bakery trade; Richard Alge, an Austrian immigrant who owned part of a Woodland meat company and was also a director of the First National Bank of Woodland; other partners of the Yolo Brewing Company were Emil Niclas and George Geppert.

The Yolo brewery advertised steam and lager beer and supplied local saloons with wooden kegs of brew delivered by horse-drawn carts. The Gazetteer reported in 1870 that:

"The beer manufactured in Yolo County has long sustained a first-class reputation, it being asserted that the water is peculiarly adapted to the business."

The Yolo Brewery had a ready local supply of barley and hops used in the production of beer. Yolo County barley was considered by many breweries as a superior barley for malting and brewing. Historically much of the barley was grown in the "Hungry Hollow" area of Capay Valley. Local grain merchants sold large quantities of barley to breweries and malting companies throughout California. There was also an extensive network of trade with Great Britain and Ireland breweries including Bass and Guinness. Balfour & Guthrie were English grain traders with an office located for several years at First and Main in Woodland. Today, grain merchants in Woodland recall that a brewery in England, whose name is not remembered, apparently called one of their brews "Yolo Beer" in honor of the Yolo County barley malt from which it was brewed.

Local breweries also had close access to fresh hops grown mostly in the eastern part of Yolo County near the Sacramento River. Lovedale and Merkley were two families that grew hops locally. The "Daily Democrat" in 1912 reported that:

"Charles Merkley has just purchased sixty acres on the Yolo side of the Sacramento River for $525 per acre. The high price is because the soil is rich hop land known for its remarkable producing properties".

Yolo Beer was also sold locally at sporting events, including the racetrack near College and Kentucky Avenues, and at German social events and dances, such as the "Liederkrantz" held just north of Woodland at Coyle's Grove. Here beer was sold for 5 cents a stein.

Prohibition shut down the Yolo Brewery in 1919 and the brewery was used as "a sort of hotel" during this era. In 1933, the Yolo Brewery re-opened as a bottle shop, most likely selling beer brewed elsewhere. On September 8, 1934, the Yolo Brewery caught fire and burned down, thus dramatically ending the era of locally brewed beer in Yolo County.

Yolo Brewery

Summary of information from Daily Democrat, August 17, 1961
(Special commemorative issue)

- 1832 Wartenburg Germany
- 1861 John Scherley and Antone Miller founded brewery 2 miles out of Woodland.
- 1861 Moved brewery to building across the street from Holy Rosary Academy. Academy was located where J.C. Penney's store is now)
Original capacity was 6 barrels/day
- 1868 Addition built and production increased. Yolo barley was very popular and was used in beer. England was big market.
- 1881 Joe Germeshausen bought brewery. He had five partners: Chris Sieber, Dick Alge, Otto Schluer, Emil Niclas, George Geppert
- 1889 The brewery advertised Steam and Lager Beer. Production was 25 barrels/day
- 1919-- Prohibition. During this period the brewery building was used as "a sort of hotel."
- 1933 Repeal. Brewery was a bottle shop.
- Sept. 8, 1934. Building burned down.

I thought the brewery was located on West Main Street.
The Woodland Daily Democrat, Feb. 1, 1879 carried an ad for the Woodland Brewery (same one.) Wirth Bros, Proprietors. Manufacturers of best quality of Lager Beer. Families supplied to order on short notice.
Location was Lincoln Ave. - presumably on south side of Academy.

I don't know. We will need to check property deeds and/or assessment records to get precise location.

Both came from Ohio in 1861

On September 8, 1934, the Yolo Brewery caught fire and burned down, thus dramatically ending the era of locally brewed beer in Yolo County.

Yolo Brewery

Summary of information from Daily Democrat, August 17, 1961
(Special commemorative issue)

- 1832 Wartenburg Germany
- 1861 John Scherley and Antone Miller founded brewery 2 miles out of Woodland.
- 1861 Moved brewery to building across the street from Holy Rosary Academy. Academy was located where J.C. Penney's store is now)
Original capacity was 6 barrels/day
- 1868 Addition built and production increased. Yolo barley was very popular and was used in beer. England was big market
- 1881 Joe Germeshausen bought brewery. He had five partners: Chris Sieber, Dick Alge, Otto Schluer, Emil Niclas, George Geppert
- 1889 The brewery advertised Steam and Lager Beer. Production was 25 barrels/day
- 1919-- Prohibition. During this period the brewery building was used as "a sort of hotel."
- 1933 Repeal. Brewery was a bottle shop.
- Sept. 8, 1934. Building burned down.

I thought the brewery was located on West Main Street.
The Woodland Daily Democrat, Feb. 1, 1879 carried an ad for the Woodland Brewery (same one.) Wirth Bros, Proprietors. Manufacturers of best quality of Lager Beer. Families supplied to order on short notice.
Location was Lincoln Ave. - presumably on south side of Academy.

I don't know. We will need to check property deeds and/or assessment records to get precise location.

Both came from Ohio in 1861

Brewery started on Lowe Farm

$500 investment 1863 5 acres of land + improvements

WOODLAND CITY OF TREES

water mud. (The gravel came from a deposit located on East Street between Lemen and Armfield avenues.) In summer the streets were sprinkled with water to hold down the dust. (A favorite summer pastime of children was to run behind the horse-drawn water wagon, shouting with glee as they got thoroughly soaked.) The town also built and maintained wooden sidewalks downtown, and Main Street businesses thoughtfully built porticos over them to protect pedestrians from the winter rains and summer sun.

In the residential areas were many native oaks and sycamores, which partially shaded the streets and houses. Anxious to maintain Woodland's image as a "city of trees," Freeman, along with Russell B. Blowers and Richard L. Beamer, started a program to plant additional shade trees within the city limits.

A DIVERSE POPULATION

Woodland's population in the 1870s was a diverse lot. Many of the town's early pioneers were Americans from the South and East who had spent formative years in Missouri before coming West. They exerted a strong influence on the town's character throughout the rest of the nineteenth century. As the community developed, however, people from other countries came to settle here, drawn by the lure of good farmland or jobs in town, and brought with them different ideas, abilities, and dreams that gradually transformed Woodland into a real city.

GERMANS

One prominent group was the Germans, who began arriving in Yolo County in the 1860s. Some came to the vacant land north of Cache Creek and started raising wheat and barley; others settled in town. These Germans soon discovered that the barley grown in Yolo County was ideally suited for beer-making. In 1861, John K. Schuerley from Wurttemberg, Germany, and his partner Antone Miller started a small brewery two miles north of Woodland, where they raised their own barley and hops. After Woodland was made the county seat in 1862, they moved their Yolo Brewery into town. In 1868 they built a new brick building on Main Street west of the business district, where they produced six barrels of beer a day. (This same Schuerley was elected to the first Woodland Board of Trustees.) Antone Miller died in 1879, and in 1881 Schuerley sold the Yolo Brewery to Joseph Germeshausen, a Prussian who had recently arrived in Woodland.

The five other partners in the Yolo Brewery were all German-speaking newcomers as well. Otto Schluer, from Hanover, Germany, operated the Woodland Bakery in the old Henry Wyckoff building. Christian Seiber, from Wurttemberg, Germany, was an early partner of Schluer's in the bakery business, and later had his own saloon. Richard Alge, from Austria, owned part of the Armstrong & Alge meat company. Two other German partners were Emil Niclas and George Geppert.

Another German, George L. Wirth, started the Woodland Brewery in 1869 on the south side of Lincoln Street near Walnut Street. He believed that Woodland could well support more than one brewery. The Western Shore Gazetteer of 1870 reported, "It is the intention of the proprietors to enlarge their business, and compete with other breweries for the trade in other localities."

Not all the early Germans in Woodland were in the food and drink business. A. Nickelsburg sold merchandise, E.G. Hoernlein painted carriages and signs, and Herman Kuhn, the enthusiastic volunteer fireman, was a tinsmith. Peter Krellenberg started a cabinet-making business on Main Street in 1869. With the town growing rapidly and many new homes being built, he soon expanded his business to sell furniture ordered from San Francisco. He also built coffins and became the town's undertaker. In 1872 he built a one-story brick building on the southwest corner of Main and Third streets, which was destroyed by fire in 1881. Subsequently he built a two-story building on the same site, which was still standing in 1994.

The Germans who came to live in and near Woodland seem to have kept strong ties to their native language, religion, and customs, yet at the same time they were becoming Americans, learning English, and contributing their skills and energy to their adopted city. By 1885 they were successful enough for some of the men to organize the Woodland Liederkrantz, a German social club whose main purpose was to sing German songs and have fun. The club regularly marched in parades, held picnics at Coil's Grove, and gave dancing parties.

Meanwhile, German women organized the Deutsches Frauenverein (German Ladies Fellowship) in 1888. Devout Christians who were anxious to have a church in which they could worship in German, they persuaded their husbands and friends to form the German Evangelical St. John's Church on July 16, 1891. During the next year they raised $4,000 to build a church, completed in November 1892 on the west side of Cleveland Street, just south of Main Street. During the first years of the church, about 60 families regularly worshipped there. (In 1957 the church became St. John's United Church of Christ, and in 1991 celebrated its one hundredth birthday.)

J. C. MONTGOMERY

Other localities besides his own community recognize in Mr. Montgomery one of the most experienced horsemen of the entire state. His interest in and liking for animals date back to his earliest recollections, and he can scarcely recall the time when he was not familiar with the qualifications necessary for well-bred horses. The care of stock came intuitively to him, and even in early youth his judgment was sought by his seniors when in doubt as to the best method of caring for or training a certain horse. As a boy he became interested in raising trotting stock, and he has continued in the enterprise to the present time, meanwhile selling many fine specimens, as well as retaining several that have made records. At one time he was part owner of the famous French stallion Fortuno, which was awarded medals at French shows, and as a three-year-old won the second prize at the California state fair. For a number of years the animal sired all of the fine colts raised in this vicinity and some fillies sired by him are still on the Montgomery farm. Dan Logan, 2:11 $\frac{1}{4}$, which Mr. Montgomery owns and has entered at a number of races in the pacing class, and which was raised on his farm, is by Charles Durby, out of Effie Logan, and a full brother of Jim Logan, the champion three-year-old pacer of the world, holding now and for some time past the world's record of 2:03 $\frac{1}{4}$.

The distinction of being a native-born son of Yolo county belongs to Mr. Montgomery, who was born near Davis in 1872, and is a member of a highly-respected family of the community. Attendance at the public schools was followed by a course of study in Hesperian College at Woodland, and upon the completion of his education he returned to the old homestead to assist his mother in its management, remaining there until 1895. For a time he farmed in partnership with his brother, and later he engaged in agricultural pursuits on his own account. At this writing he owns and occupies forty acres in Solano county, across the line from Yolo county, besides owning fifty-five acres in the same neighborhood. For three successive years his home ranch was under cultivation to sugar beets, and this enriched the soil to such an extent that the year afterward he harvested forty sacks of barley to the acre.

After leaving the old homestead, Mr. Montgomery established a home for himself, being united in marriage, in November of 1895, with Miss Glory C. Miller, who was born and reared in Woodland, Cal., and received an excellent education in the schools of the state. Her father, Antone Miller, was an honored early settler of California, and a sketch of his life appears elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery have two children, a daughter, Mary Ethel, to whom is being given all the educational advantages within the means of her parents, and a son, Edwin Lowell. The family standing is high socially and they have a large circle of friends in the community, where for years they have been prominent residents.

HON. FRANCIS E. BAKER

A native of Michigan, Francis E. Baker was born in Quincy, October 2, 1839, and he made his home in his native state until he became a resident of California. His early education was followed by a course in Hillsdale College, which he entered in 1860 and continued his studies there until the fall of 1862. It was at that time that he entered the law department of the University of Michigan, and immediately after his graduation, March 31, 1864, he was admitted to the bar. In the following year he came to California via Panama, and in 1867 he located in Yolo county, and here he engaged in teaching until 1871, when he began the practice of law. In September, 1873, he was elected district attorney, and in 1875 he was re-elected, thus holding the office from March 4, 1874, until March 4, 1878.

For many years Mr. Baker was a leader in the Democratic party and a shining light among the attorneys of the state. In 1880 he was elected to the assembly of the Twenty-fourth legislature, and during his term of office he represented his constituents ably. He was a member of the board of education, was one of the library trustees, and held various other municipal offices, in all of which he showed good judgment and a keen loyalty to the community's best interests. Fraternally he was a Mason and was past worshipful master and was also honored by an election to Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of California. He also held membership in the Knights of Pythias and the Uniform Rank, K. P.

In Woodland, July 19, 1874, Mr. Baker was married to Miss Addie E. Thomas, a native of Monroe, Green county, Wis., and the daughter of Charles S. and Josephine L. (Wallace) Thomas. (A sketch of Charles S. Thomas will be found elsewhere in this volume.) Mr. Baker was one of God's noblemen. He was generous to a fault, true as steel, and all who came in contact with him liked him instinctively. He was a very able man, with broad ideas and a remarkably strong and bright intellect, and he left a record

LOSSES BY FIRE.

One of the Neary Cottages Is Totally Destroyed.

R. E. Stevens and Wife, the Tenants,
Save Nothing—Other Property
Is Damaged.

A few minutes before 9 o'clock Wednesday night an alarm of fire was turned in from the Marine House. Roy Porter and his sister, Miss Rita, were on their way up Main street when they discovered that one of the Neary cottages, on West street, was on fire. They went to the cottage and found it burning. Mr. Porter ran to the nearest box and turned in an alarm. In the meantime J. O. M. made ineffectual efforts to gain entrance to the building. While so engaged there was an explosion which drove him away. When he discovered the fire the whole interior of the cottage was ablaze. It was some time after the fire was discovered that the explosion occurred. R. E. Stevens and wife, who occupied the cottage, were attending the Republican rally. When they left there was no fire about the place except a few coals in the fireplace. They left a lamp burning, but it was turned down low. They recently purchased a coal oil heater, which possibly accounts for the explosion. Neither of them knew of the misfortune that had overtaken them until the cottage was in ashes.

The fire department responded promptly, and in an incredibly short time had two streams of water playing on the fire. It was too late, however, to save either the building or any of the contents. The whole building was already enveloped in flames and the roof was falling in. All that could be done was to prevent the spread of the flames to adjoining buildings.

The next cottage north, occupied by W. O. Kean and his mother and sister, would likely have been destroyed but for the rain. As it was, the south wall was badly scorched and a hole burned in the roof, and the building was otherwise damaged by the drenching of water it received.

A number of people began to move the furniture and take up the carpets, and a great many articles were placed out in the rain and mud before Mr. Kean arrived and stopped it. The furniture was considerably damaged, but the loss is probably covered by insurance.

In the cottage occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Stevens there was a piano that belonged to H. Woolley. It was insured for $200. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens lost all their clothing except what they had on. They also lost their furniture. There was a large and fine collection of music and some musical instruments. They have an insurance policy of $1500, but say that amount will not cover the loss in music alone.

The cottage was insured for $800. The entire loss will fall upon companies represented by Huston & Joslyn, who carried risks on all four of the Neary cottages and their contents.

The Montgomery Family

WILLIAM MONTGOMERY

Listed among the earliest American settlers in the South Putah district are William Montgomery (May 15, 1802-May 8, 1877) and his four sons. A native of Logan County, Kentucky, from about 1825 he farmed and raised stock in Missouri. In 1850, accompanied by three sons (Hugh, Alexander, and William W.), he journeyed overland to join another son, Robert, in search of gold in El Dorado County, California. Robert had crossed the plains in 1849. After a brief but successful venture in mining, the Montgomerys found suitable land for agricultural operations in Yolo County. They are believed to have settled early in 1851 in a triangular area (thereafter known as the "Montgomery Sink") where the original flow of Putah Creek disappeared into the Tular, or tule swamplands, to the east.

William and Alexander Montgomery returned to Missouri for their wives in 1853. Rebecca Simmons, wife of William, had been born in North Carolina and reared in Kentucky. Thereafter, she made her home northeast of Roads 32A and 104 until she died in her 85th year. The original Montgomery homestead was consumed by flames in 1935.

William Montgomery, a successful stockman and farmer whose horses won premium awards at the California State Fair as early as 1859, was a member of the State Agricultural Society, and a staunch supporter of the Democratic Party.

"Jim Logan," driven by John Elmo Montgomery, was photographed in 1914 when he set a new Pacific Coast record of 2:11¼ in the mile race at the Woodland track.

Robert Montgomery, whose name first appeared in Yolo County land records on September 23, 1852, did not remain in the Davisville area. It is reported that he had two daughters: Clara, who lived in Washington; and Becky, who married W. H. Bradshaw of Davisville.

Hugh Montgomery (March 12, 1834-April 25, 1869) was born in Missouri, died at 35, and was buried in the Davisville cemetery. He married and had two daughters who were schoolteachers, and a son, Henry Duff.

THE MONTGOMERY FAMILY

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY

Alexander Montgomery (March 3, 1822-April 12, 1884) was born in Kentucky. He farmed a section of land where the present Willowbank and Oakside subdivisions are located, and built a small house south of Road 32A. He then returned to Missouri for his wife and two children. Susan Martin Montgomery, whom he married in 1845, was born January 8, 1828, in Fairfax County, Virginia, and moved to Missouri with her parents, Andrew and Katherine Harrison Martin. She died in April 1906.

Of the fourteen children born to Alexander and Susan Montgomery, three died in infancy.

William S., the eldest, was born in Missouri. He farmed his father's ranch on shares from 1872-1876, before settling in Willows, California. He and his first wife, Nancy Jane Rall, had four children, three of whom, Etta (Mrs. Jack Johnson), Elmer and Ida M. (Foster), lived past childhood. After his first wife died he married Magdalena Glockler, daughter of Charles Glockler, by whom he had six children; Frank, Gertrude, Caroline (Mrs. Tracy Hoag), William, Marie, and Oleta.

Rebecca M., also born in Missouri, married William King, who owned land southeast of Davisville. The Kings had seven children: Kathryn, Amanda, Edna, Belle, Nell, Jackson, Joseph, and Daisy (see King).

Susan Josephine married John A. Johnson of Woodland and had three children.

Sarah E. married Enoch Johnson of Lincoln.

Dora Alice married L. L. Ralls. Their children were Clinton and Josephine (m. Del Fenton), of Woodland.

Minnie Jeff Davis Montgomery married Eli Snider, who served on the Yolo County Board of Supervisors (1907-1911). He owned the Putah Creek Nursery, where he practices progressive theories of horticulture, and lived with his wife and only son, Alexander, in a home east of Road 103, where the palm trees stand today.

Lee Jackson Stewart married Katherine Glockler. Their children were: Lee, Delbert, and Mabel (Mrs. Frank Hamilton), all of Davis.

Andrew, who married Louisa Glockler, had one daughter, Marguerite, a retired school teacher of Davis.

Orlena married Ed Glockler, also a child of Charles Glockler, a pioneer who, in 1870, owned sixty acres northwest of Road 31 and the railroad.

James Carey built the home which still stands south of the intersection of Montgomery Road and 103. He married Glory Miller and had two children: Richard, of Pacific Grove; and Ethel (Mrs. Keith Stewart), of Arizona.

John Pelham married Letta Tamm. They had one daughter, Madge. Both Carey (owner of Dan Logan) and "Pel" Montgomery raised trotting stock and trained them on a track south of Willowbank.

Children of this large family received their education in the Montgomery School, near their home, and in Woodland, where Alexander Montgomery built a three-story home, in 1872, so that his children could attend Hesperian College. After the deaths of Alexander and Susan Montgomery, their 640-acre ranch was divided among their many children. Subsequent sale of these properties has left none of the original homestead in family hands, although many of their descendants live in Davis and continue to promote its development.

WILLIAM W. MONTGOMERY

William W. Montgomery (March 31, 1830-April 12, 1894) was born in Missouri. Upon arrival in Yolo County he claimed land along the original Putah Creek both west and east of Mace Boulevard and south of Road 32A, where a brick residence was constructed in about 1860. To this home, which still stands, he brought his bride, Caroline Jones, whom he married in Santa Rosa on October 23, 1862. Caroline (1841-1925), the daughter of William M. and Nancy Bass Jones, was born in Missouri. In 1857, her family had come by ox-cart to Santa Rosa, California, where her father served as Justice of the Peace.

Two sons were born to William W. and Caroline Montgomery: John Elmo (1871-December 24, 1937) and George (September 13, 1875-March 10, 1884). William W., who raised grain and Thoroughbred horses, was killed in a runaway accident in 1894. Afterward, his widow and son, John Elmo, continued operations with the assistance of Florentine Vaca, long-time ranch foreman. Under the guidance of Caroline Montgomery the properties were increased from 1,103 to 1,220 acres in Yolo County, plus 94 acres in Solano County. Several hundred acres were adapted to pasture, and the rest to dry farming. Purebred Shorthorn Durham cattle were raised and shipped elsewhere in California and to Nevada and Texas.

John Elmo, who became the sole heir to this ranch when Caroline died, was born in the family homestead in 1871. He was long identified with the Purple Circle and was noted for his purebred sheep and standard bred trotting and pacing horses. In 1908, he purchased the best-known of his race horses, the famous Jim Logan and mother, Effie Logan, from Mr. McNery of Hawaii. In 1911 at Woodland, Jim Logan broke the world's record for a three-year-old pacer, with a time of 2.04 $\frac{1}{4}$; and in 1914 he set a new California record of 2.01 $\frac{3}{4}$. His own son, Walter Logan, broke this record in 1937, with a time of 2.0. Jim Logan, often referred to as "the horse that made Yolo County famous," was twenty-eight years old when he died. A special stone marks his grave, under the oaks on the Montgomery Ranch.

Portions of the Montgomery stables, where as many as 41 horses were kept at a time, still stand south of the site of the half-mile race track where Mr. Montgomery trained his prize-winning trotters and pacers, some of which sold for $10,000.

John Elmo married Margaret Elizabeth Stone (1878-1955), born at Knights Landing, the daughter of Yolo County pioneers Michael E. and Annie Kuhn Stone. She attended school in Yolo County and moved to Davisville with her family in 1881. After her husband's death, in 1918, Margaret Stone Montgomery continued the family interest in race horses and farmed the entire ranch with the assistance of her son, John Elmo, Jr.,

THE MONTGOMERY FAMILY

and son-in-law, Willis Towne, Jr. In 1955, the ranch was divided between the three heirs of John Elmo and Margaret Montgomery: Carolyn Catherine, Mary Maxine, and John Elmo, Jr.

Carolyn married Willis Towne, Jr., and still resides in the home her parents built in 1910. They are the parents of Willis Towne III, also of the family ranch; Thomas, of Colusa; and Charles, deceased.

Maxine, wife of the late Paul R. Cote, lives in Los Angeles and has two children, Mary Maxine (Mrs. Lawrence Corcoran) and Paul Raymond, Jr.

John Elmo, Jr., who lives west of El Macero with his wife, the former Florence Lamoree of Woodland, has a daughter, Joan Elmo, and an adopted son, Brent Lee, also of Davis.

Portions of the Montgomery ranch were sold in 1958 for development of El Macero Golf and Country Club, and additional lands to the north and south have recently been sold to developers of residential and commercial properties. In 1968, only 165 acres of oak-studded farmland, surrounding the homes of William W. and John Elmo Montgomery, remain in family hands. These are owned by Carolyn Montgomery Towne, who hopes to preserve the original brick home as a tribute to her pioneer grandparents.

Historic Ireland

FROM PRE-CHRISTIAN TIMES TO THE TURMOIL OF TODAY

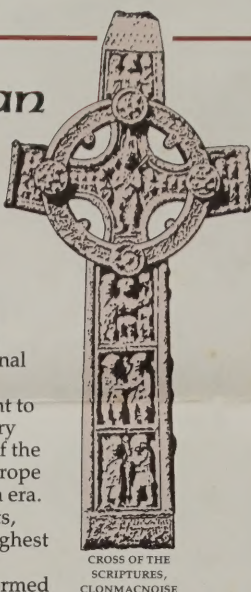

Pre-Norman Ireland

First Century B.C.
-A.D. 1168

When the Irish spirit for independence from England welled at the turn of the 19th century, patriots found national identity in the ancient Irish language and culture, brought to Ireland during the first century B.C. by the Gaels—a branch of the dynamic Celts who swept Europe centuries before the Christian era.

Gaelic priests, judges, poets, and historians enjoyed the highest social prestige as the sacred learned class, and warriors formed the nobility. But the Celtic penchant for battle defied political unity, and as many as 150 tribal kingdoms quilted the island.

Roman forces that routed the Celtic culture in Europe never reached Ireland. The Gaels absorbed a more gentle Latin invasion in the fifth century—Christianity. If the legend-inspiring St. Patrick was not the first missionary in Ireland, he was without doubt the most successful, converting many influential leaders.

The Christian movement blossomed in monasteries that were organized on a tribal basis and reflected the ruling family's wealth. Monks developed a written Irish language and transcribed Gaelic lore and tradition. Pagan and Christian decorative art merged in exquisite illuminated manuscripts, such as the Book of Kells. Zealous Irish monks established their own missions on the Continent.

The plunder of monastic wealth by neighboring kingdoms was commonplace politics in Ireland. The treasures were also a favorite target of seafaring Vikings throughout the ninth and tenth centuries. The Northmen never dominated Ireland but gradually aligned themselves with various chieftains. They generally lived apart from the rural Gaels, established Ireland's first towns, and expanded trade.

Political change altered Gaelic culture during the last half of the first millennium A.D., as chieftains ambitious for power began to consolidate petty kingdoms into realms that remain today as Ireland's four provinces: Leinster, Munster, Connaught, and Ulster.

Famed warrior Brian Boru, King of Munster, took the title High King in 1002, the first to attempt rule over all Ireland. But political unity remained elusive in Ireland's caldron of family rivalries, and the high kingship was won or lost by the sword.

Medieval Ireland

1169-1690

Anglo-Norman England entered Ireland's embattled politics by invitation in 1169, when Dermot MacMurrough, deposed King of Leinster, petitioned Henry II for troops to restore his throne. Small in number but superior in battle, Normans began to assume power. Henry II, alarmed by the independence of his barons, toured Ireland in 1171, asserting his lordship and demanding allegiance from both Gaelic and Norman rulers. By 1250 Normans controlled three-quarters of Ireland. Great stone castles recall their reign. They introduced feudalism, founded walled towns, and began to divide the land into counties. Dublin became an administrative center with an independent Irish Parliament.

As war elsewhere diverted England's armies and funds, Gaelic families ousted some of the invaders. More commonly, Anglo-Normans became Gaelo-Normans, intermarrying and adopting Irish ways. By 1400 the area known as the Pale—where English law was observed and enforced—extended only slightly beyond Dublin (whence originated the term “beyond the pale”).

Henry VIII strengthened England's political control and took the title King of Ireland in 1541. He declared his realms officially Protestant, but the Irish people remained Roman Catholic, and this religious schism deepened mutual animosity.

Wary of Spanish naval attack, Elizabeth I enlarged English armies in Ireland and subdued native rulers. Seeking to populate Ireland with loyal subjects, she and her successor, James I, chartered a series of plantations. Ironically, the only successful plantation rose in Ulster—the strongest citadel of Gaelic culture and last to surrender to English troops—where Protestant Scots and English formed a majority of landholders in 1640.

A mid-17th-century island rebellion was quelled with bloody thoroughness by Oliver Cromwell. At century's end Protestants—20 percent of the population—owned 86 percent of Ireland.

Modern Ireland

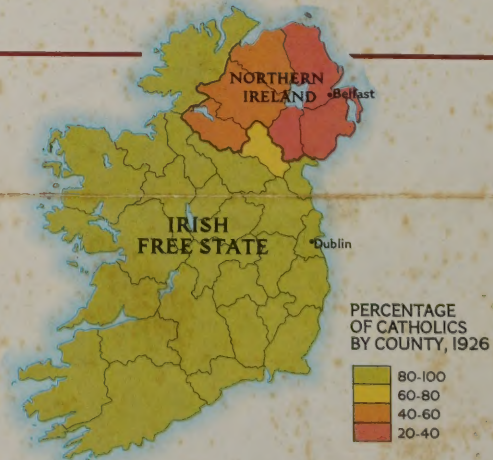

1691-Present

The most severe yoke of English Protestant rule, the penal laws, forbade Catholics to buy or inherit land, bear arms, build churches, or conduct Mass. Laws against worship proved unenforceable, but land laws reduced most Catholics to tenant farmers subject to eviction and high rent.

The Anglo-Irish ruling class prospered during the 1700s and removed most penal laws before the close of the century. A bloody rebellion in the late 1790s inspired by the Protestant idealist Theobald Wolfe Tone—father of Irish nationalism—failed either to cast off English domination or to bind together the various Irish factions. The 1801 Act of Union joined Ireland to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and abolished the Irish Parliament. Daniel O’Connell, the Catholic Emancipator, captivated the masses and in 1830 became the first Irish Catholic member of the Westminster Parliament.

Mounting efforts to repeal the Act of Union were overshadowed by the calamitous potato famine (1845-51). Repeated failure of this staple crop claimed an estimated million lives. An even greater number of Irish emigrated, most of them to the United States and England, starting a population decline not reversed until the 1960s.

Nationalism galvanized post-famine Ireland.
Parliamentary maneuvers and the terrorist activities of groups such as the Fenians eventually brought about home rule in 1914, but World War I postponed the transfer of power.

Proclaiming Ireland a republic, a coalition of political groups staged the short-lived 1916 Easter uprising in Dublin. Execution of the leaders increased anti-British sentiment, and rebellion escalated into war in 1919. Finally an uneasy truce, ratified in 1922, divided the island into the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland—six counties with a Protestant majority that demanded to remain in the United Kingdom. The Irish Free State withdrew from the Commonwealth in 1949 to become the completely independent Republic of Ireland, called Eire in Gaelic.

LONDONDERRY
Northern Ireland's second largest city long ago spread beyond its town walls to the most complete in Ireland. In 1605 Derry endured a 105-day siege by James before relief arrived from William of Orange.
